

Agriculture Department

Regulatory Science BS degree program student learning outcomes (based on stated goals).

A graduate of the Regulatory Science baccalaureate program should be:

- a) Prepared for entry-level positions with federal and state regulatory/compliance agencies and private industry;
- b) Understand the legislative and judicial powers delegated to federal and state agencies;
- c) Intimately familiar with risk analysis, public policy, agriculture, environmental biology, and related regulatory disciplines; and
- d) Versed in regulatory issues and the core knowledge, skills, and competencies germane to Agriculture Science, Environmental Biology, or Industrial Health and Safety.